

Mrs. Jeremiah Milbank of New York and Port Chester, painted by Arthur L. Halmi.

King Haakon of Norway is devoted to skiing. He is shown here at the Holmenkol ski races, in which his son, Olav, participated. Underwood & Underwood.

A mysterious rider and her remarkable performing horse, seen every day in Potomac Park, Washington.

This is pretty Olga Cook in the principal feminine role in "Blossom Time," at the Ambassador Theater. A. C. Johnston.

Flying without a motor is the great sport in Europe now. Here is shown a plane piloted by Suendet, a Swiss aviator, which flew at a height of 200 feet and remained in the air for twenty-nine seconds. Kadel & Herbert.

At left—King George of Great Britain is seen here chatting with the captain of a football team after the game. Wide World.

At right—This is former U. S. Senator Samuel H. Piles of Seattle, who has just been appointed Minister to Colombia. (c) Harris & Ewing.

Vassar's debating team at Amherst College. "Compulsory Arbitration for Industrial Disputes" was the subject under discussion. From left to right: Margaret Ray, Los Angeles; Rachel Higgins, Brooklyn, and Lois Barclay, Cincinnati.

This is talented Doris Keane, who has scored another great triumph in "The Czarina," now showing at the Empire Theater. White Studio.

The solemn procession at the enthronement of Melbourne's new Archbishop. International.